

As a citizen and teacher, I'm appalled by the degree to which the free market place of ideas is being constrained by economic concentration of ownership. What ever happened to primary concern for the "public interest, convenience and necessity" tests of the 1934 Communication Act which were supposed to guide FCC decision making? Congress must step in and begin reversing a process that is deeply corrosive to the democratic ideal of public airwaves for the public good.